Travel the Google Earth Virtual Tour Through Wyoming's Togwotee Trail, The Best Route to Yellowstone!

Lander, WY – Tour Wyoming's Wind River Country with the Google Earth 3-D Tour on http://www.wind-river.org/info/ge_tours.php

Imagine soaring through the Wind River Mountains, the Dubois Badlands, and over the Continental Divide on Togwotee Pass and most places in between Wyoming's Wind

River Country and Yellowstone National Park. You are your own pilot while you explore the wonderful splendor of Wind River Country without ever leaving your seat! Using the technology you download directly from Google, it takes just minutes to experience a virtual tour right from your computer.

The Togwotee Trail virtual Tour, part of the Centennial Scenic Byway, features 25 scenic, historic and cultural points of interest between Wind River Country and the border of Yellowstone National Park. Your virtual tour begins in Wyoming's Wind River Country near the town of Dubois and weaves its way up to Togwotee Pass above 9,000 feet in elevation, across the Continental Divide. Here towering breccia cliffs—made up of volcanic debris and carved by wind into sandcastle-like turrets and battlements—surround the highway as it skirts the southern edge of the Absaroka Mountains. This Google Earth 3-D Tour will entertain and educate you about this wonderful Wyoming area. It's a great tool to plan your Wyoming vacation.
